VALENTINE'S POETRY COMPETITIONS - some of our favourite submissions so far!

Pro-Valentine:
to win dinner for two at The Magdalen Arms
LOVE
Love can leave you in fits of laughter,
Love also forgets to put the seat down after,
Love gets us into more than what parts of it are mine and which are his,
Love please share that bhuna you've ordered!
Love makes us go crazy-doo-lally!
Love is not just a quick snog in the ally,
Love tells the truth but never fat, I know,
Love comes round once, or twice- or three times for Joe.
Love will always see you for what you are,
Love transcends whether you're near or far,
Love will always find its way- you'll see,
Love just happens, so let it be.
Dottiepeas, 22/01/10
Love
At the border they will ask me, Nationality?
Where were you born? Where do you live now?
Is that bag yours? Did you pack it yourself?
Who are these names at your address with you?
I will answer, I am a naturalised citizen of a small country
Bounded by two doors, with a population of three.
The baggage I carry belongs to that nation.
I can't say any more which parts of it are mine and which are his,
But we hold a handle each, and we packed it together.
You never know the national anthem, it is a whisper.
Patriot? We don't need to be. Our roots are too deep.
Those names are my compatriots, and we travel together.
We are each other's greatest strength.
A whole community begins to morph into pachyderms.
CR, 31/01/10
Love, for one day only?
Love is mucky, inspiring, tiring, tough!
Folk never quite admit that, especially not today.
It is about showing everyone the sweet-smelling smushy stuff,
the "always love you's", and the "being better with you, than without you's" which make you stay.
Today is the day where we don't mention jealousy, rage and that weird power play.
It is just best not.
But after Valentine's is over, the kisses made, the chocolates eaten and the cards put away,
We still have love in our own weird way.
MM, 29/01/10
