JOBS OFFERED

Project Specialist - Mathematics / Statistics - 2/3 week task

The company
The Oxford Partnership is a small, established marketing and research and consultancy supplying strategic market information to a small number of major UK companies - primarily in the retail, alcoholic drinks and leisure markets. The company is extremely well regarded by both the clients it works with and within the markets in which it operates.

The requirement
The majority of the projects for which we are commissioned are undertaken in house, but there are a few where specialist knowledge is required. This particular task is one. We estimate that it will take an appropriate specialist up to two or three weeks, on a part time basis, to complete their part of the task, for which they will be paid market rates.

The task
We are looking for someone adept with figures - mathematics/statistics - who can help model a market and project its size five and ten years hence using current data - market, economic and demographic. The results need to be as accurate and robust as possible as they will be used by the supply chain within this particular sector for business planning.

The person
It doesn't matter who you are as long as you can do the job. That probably means you will be studying a subject with a major element of mathematical and/or statistical modelling involved, under graduate or post graduate and also be proficient with a computer. We have a desk and a computer you can use if needed. Payment is negotiable but will be based on commercial rates.

Response
If you're interested please email colin@oxford-partnership.com with any information about yourself that you think is relevant
