OXFORD HISTORY

Taken from Mary Potter's Oxford Calendar

The St Scholastica's Day Riot began with a brawl at the Swindlestock Tavern at Carfax (where the Abbey National Bank now stands). The mechanics of pub brawling appear to have changed little since 1355 - fighting started when some scholars threw wine in the landlord's face, and followed it up with a quart pot. The townsmen rang the bell of Carfax tower, and the students that of St Mary's, to summon their respective forces. Thousands of wild country folk rushed into the city crying "Havac! Havac! Smyt fast, give gode knocks!". 63 students were killed, and the rest fled.

But though the townspeople won the day, they lost the war, for the University invoked the assistance of the king. For 500 years (until 1825) the Mayor and 63 citizens were obliged to do penance on the 10th February, the anniversary of the riot: each had to process to St Mary's, bow before the Vice-Chancellor, and pay a fine of a penny.
