Alumni and Development Office Keble College
Executive Assistant - £25k
 This new position will provide full-time secretarial, administrative and research support to the Director of Development and the Deputy Director of Development to help achieve the College's aims in fundraising and alumni relations.
 Continuing its tradition as a forward-thinking institution, Keble has embarked upon a campaign to celebrate its 150th anniversary in 2020. The Campaign encompasses the redevelopment of the strategically positioned Acland Site and the substantial growth of the College's endowment to support its academic vision.
 We seek a confident and highly organized administrator with proven written and verbal communication skills capable of maintaining confidentiality and discretion at all times. In addition to traditional PA responsibilities, you will have the ability to multitask and feel at ease within a senior team.
Responsibilities of the role include:
 • managing the Director's diary, co-ordinating committee meetings including circulating agenda and taking minutes
 • managing UK and overseas trip arrangements
 • use of in-house and internet tools to research priority prospects, identify potential new major prospects and produce prospect research reports to inform planning meetings
 • administrative responsibilities for the co-ordination of the Legacy Society
 • office administration for the Alumni and Development team
 As a number of events are held outside of normal office hours a willingness and flexibility to work some evenings and weekends is required.
The successful candidate will have:
 • previous experience in a PA role
 • proven research skills
 • high level of organizational skills and the ability to work to tight deadlines
 • excellent interpersonal, written and oral skills
 • working knowledge of MS Office applications
 • good level of experience with databases (knowledge of Raisers' Edge/Blackbaud software advantageous)
 The College is committed to providing opportunities for staff to participate in courses, workshops and conferences to help advance their professional knowledge. In the case of the Executive Assistant, there are opportunities in specialist areas such as research techniques, online resources, database management and more generally through CASE and other conferences.
 Benefits of working for the College include 38 days annual leave including public holidays, University contributory pension scheme as well as free meals whilst on duty.
 A full job description and person specification may be viewed on the vacancies section on our website www.keble.ox.ac.uk
 To be considered for the role, please apply by submitting a covering letter (no longer than one page) together with your CV stating how your experience and skills match those stated above to marie.ruffell@keble.ox.ac.uk. Applicants must be currently eligible to work in the UK. No agencies.
Closing date: midnight Monday 11 February 2013
 The College is an equal opportunities employer

THEATRE REVIEW
Abigail's Party
 Last week Oxford Playhouse hosted Lindsay Posner's inspired revival of Mike Leigh's 1977 sympotic musing on marriage, debauchery and the middle class.
 Leigh brings the audience, invited along with the other guests, into the living room of Beverly and her nasal-voiced estate agent husband Laurence, a paisley-printed suburban nightmare where apparently the peak of tragedy is a headbanger being delivered sans bed. Hannah Waterman gives an energised performance as the vampish hostess, strutting self-possessedly across the stage, arranging the vol-au-vents just so before new neighbours Tony and Angela arrive. Sue arrives late, seeking sanctuary from the revelries of her pink-haired punk of a daughter's party over at Number 9. Daughter Abigail's party would have perhaps been the more sober choice; pretence of polite society soon collapses under an avalanche of Bacardi, olives and cheese squares.
 Of the assembled adults, quietly thuggish Tony (Samuel James) and his harassed wife Angela (Katie Lightfoot) are perhaps more intriguing. Tony's monosyllabic dead pan is a neat balance to Beverly's broader comedy and Lightfoot's 'Ange', sitting passively as she is topped up with gin and instructed in the finer points of lipstick application, swings hilariously between wide-eyed, childlike vacuity and gross impropriety. It's just the worst thing, she adds at one point, 'vomitting in front of blokes'.
 Lines are finally drawn over a question of taste; Laurence nasally dismissing his wife's music choice as 'fat Greek cater wauling' and her art as 'porn'. As Demis Roussos plays on the record player, ex-footballer Tony leaps hungrily into his dancing hostess's arms. Laurence's only recourse is to thrust his book collection beneath Sue's startled nose - Dickens and Shakespeare, gold-plated but, he points out, 'not something you'd actually read'.
 We are reminded of Abigail's revlries sporadically; thumping music, teenage squealing, even the occasional anecdote managed to be heard over the 'grown-up' squabbling of Number 13. And as the play twirls to its heady conclusion, the quintet's carefully crafted domesticity disintegrates utterly to the strains of Beethoven's fifth - with the volume turned down of course (wouldn't want to upset the neighbours now, would we?).
