EXCLUSIVE INTERVIEW

Folk-rock singer-songwriter Al Stewart comes to the New Theatre, Oxford for a rare acoustic concert on May 7th (see Theatre listings). Daily Info's Glenn Watson catches up with the legend himself and invites Al to look back over a music career spanning almost forty years.

Al, you're coming to Oxford - any memories of playing here before?
 I used to play there all the time. Not for a while though. I've played Oxford Town Hall at least half a dozen times. You don't really get to see the places you go to. You travel there, do the sound-check, do the show, get back in the car and go away again. But I have wandered around Oxford.

You're appearing with guitarist Laurence Juber who's produced your recent albums. Why have you never produced your own records?
 The job of a producer is to tell you when you're being ridiculous! Once, I was making a song called Life in a Bottle that never got released. We had four or five goes and eventually I hear Alan Parsons (producer of Year of the Cat)'s voice over the headphones say "You know, I don't think this is one of your best songs."

How do you go about composing your songs? And deciding which to play in concert?
 I have a very odd way of working. I do the tune first and then make some lyrics as I go - all the songs are nonsense to start with. Then I go back and see what it suggests. In concert, we do the guitar songs. Every night tends to be different. We're rehearsing about thirty-five so the set may change by four or five each night.

You like to try out new songs in your concerts.
 Yes I'm known to do that! I once wrote in the car on the way and then played them that night! I like that anarchic spirit because it's the spirit of the folk scene where I grew up. Over the years, rock's got a bit corporatised.

Your songs are quite cinematic. Are films important to you?
 Hugely important. I watch one a day when I'm not on the road. A pop song will say 'I love you'. A sophisticated pop song will say 'I love you' but will take place in Austria in an Italian restaurant. One of my songs will say 'I love you' but is set in the Sudetenland in 1938 and the Czechs are retreating. And all of a sudden we're in the middle of a movie!

Looking back on 18 or so albums, which are your personal favourites?
 The 1970s trio of Past, Present & Future, Modern Times and Year of the Cat - it was just a very exciting time. I didn't like my first four albums very much. Of recent ones, I very much like A Beach Full of Shells. I like my latest - Sparks of Ancient Light - but I'm not sure it's as good.

Do you have another album in preparation?
 No. I left school a couple of weeks after The Beatles released their first singles. Now I'm in my sixties and record stores are declining. There's no point making CDs if there's no outlet for them. So until they decide the next delivery system for music I've no plans to make another record.

Are you ever surprised how long and successful your career's been?
 My parents said this pop stuff isn't going to last six months. I was advised to get a job with British Leyland - forty years of solid income. And they went bankrupt. Yet the music industry that wasn't supposed to last is pottering along and I still have a job!
