REVIEW : THEATRE

Blood Brothers
by Willy Russell
Oxford Playhouse, to Sat 7th July

Willy Russell's Blood Brothers opened in Oxford last night to a practically full Playhouse and an enthusiastic audience. And rightly so, for this was a performance that won't quickly be forgotten by anyone who was there. Set in Liverpool in the 1960's, the musical tells the story of twin brothers separated at birth, their working-class mother too poor to keep them both and so giving one of the boys to her wealthy but childless employer, the latter passing the baby off as her own child. Life goes on, but while everything seems happy on the surface, the narrator brings a darker and more sinister tone to the story, reminding the audience and the characters that this 'unnatural' act can only end in disaster.

While this musical takes an interesting look at the class system in England, I found myself getting more caught up in the human element of the story, although towards the end the class issue is addressed more directly. The cast was led by brilliant performances from Denise Nolan as Mrs Johnstone and Philip Stewart as the Narrator, both performers keeping up the energy and pace of the story with their brilliantly focussed and passionate performances.

Paul Crosby and Andrew Langtree, who played the twin brothers Mickey and Eddie, were superb, managing to convincingly play the boys from ages 7 right through to their adulthood. The whole performance, though, was characterised by an incredibly strong and talented cast, with committed performances by every single person on stage. This was one of the things that struck me about the show - the energy and passion was there all the way through, really sweeping the audience up in the story.

Contributing to the strong cast and moving story were excellent musicians, imaginative and very effective lighting, and a beautiful set. The whole production was slick and polished, and yet managed to retain a rawness and roughness, remaining true to its setting. The standing ovation and 4 curtain calls the cast got at the end were truly well-deserved. See this if you can - it is well worth it.

REVIEW : CONCERT

Oxford Chamber Music Festival Evening concert, Tuesday 3 July at Freud's

Performed by James Boyd, Renaud Capucon, Isabelle Faust, Henning Kraggerud, Priya Mitchell, Jean-Guihen Queyras and Jan Soderblom

Freud's, in Walton Street, Jericho, seems to sum up Oxford's blend of ancient and modern. An eighteenth-century church, it has been transformed into a performance space, while still retaining much of its original character. It seemed an ideal venue for the sixth concert in the Oxford Chamber Music Festival, which featured both twentieth-century Hungarian repertoire and traditional folk music. A sense of unity in the programme was provided by the exotic-sounding modality, lively dance rhythms and haunting melodies that pervaded the music, creating an evening of contrasts.

Bartok's Duos for Two Violins opened the programme, easing the audience into the new sound world. Performed by two pairs of violinists who interchanged constantly between movements, the interpretation emphasised the folk basis of the music by conveying a great sense of energy and rhythm that was clearly evocative of dance music, and a more nostalgic sound more similar to a vocal lament. The audience reacted enthusiastically to the changes in character between the pieces, picking up on the intensity of the performers, who at times were hunched over the music stands like demonic Paganini-like figures, and at others relaxed into the flowing melodies.

An addition to the advertised programme was Kurtag's Five Pieces for Viola, performed by James Boyd. Another energetic performance, the music once again captured much of the spirit of the folk music that was to be heard later, albeit with a more abstract, shifting sound.

Kodaly's Duo for Violin and 'Cello was particularly well received, the performers having built up a good rapport with the audience through a casual yet confident stage presence. Despite the growing heat and gloom in the hall, the performers carried off a stirring rendition of the piece, reflecting Kodaly's love of his own folk music and heritage.

It was a shame that some members of the audience, who in the first half of the concert had appeared to be concentrating intensely on the music, now began to whisper and shuffle about in the second half. Not only was this off-putting for other listeners, but it was also very disrespectful to the musicians - the folk group Hegedos - who gave a rousing performance of traditional Hungarian music. Fortunately, the instrumentalists were not put off by these distractions, and regularly confounded those who attempted to clap in time to the strong beat of the music by unexpectedly changing rhythm. Their music was both energetic and moving, and while some pieces, such as the czardas, sounded familiar, much of it was would have been unapproachable had the performers not introduced it first. The result was a foot-stomping performance and a rare opportunity to hear such passionate music played live.

JOB GOING AT DAILY INFORMATION

New person wanted to teach themselves (with help) how to produce the sheet and run the website. But most of their time would be spent in making people aware how much more useful Daily Information could be to them than they previously realised (marketing). Dedication, amenability and inspiration would be appreciated. No - it's not scary really

How many 'yes' answers do you get to the following questions (you don't have to have a full house)?

1. Do you like creating things or changing them, in your view, for the better? Not just sitting on the Committee - did you set it up in the first place?
2. Have you got (or are you about to get) at least a 2.1 from Oxford?
3. Do you have a good basic education (separate question from 2. above)? Can you express yourself concisely in reasonable English? Spel? Do simple Arithmetic - 15 word ad. at 30p/word for 3 issues, plus VAT. How much?
4. Are you generally helpful? Would you be able to accept being moved from job to job wherever you might be thought to be needed?
5. Are you used to email, websites and MS Word?
6. Are you practical? Do you ride a bike? Have you got a driving licence? (But you could learn here)Have you ever put up a shelf? Do people come to you when they want something 'fixed'?
7. Are you a non-smoker?
8. Do you want to stay in Oxford for at least a year?
9. Are there any significant errors in this advert? If so, what are they?

£12,000.00 to start with a rise of £1,000.00 after 6 months. Plus perks. There is such a thing as a free lunch, theatre and concert tickets and shared use of the company vehicle. Full time, six weeks paid holiday. Email your questions / answers and / or applications with CV to dailyinfo@dailyinfo.co.uk, preferably, or otherwise call 553377 and ask for John.
