VAUDEVILLE REVIEW
VARIETY UP THE WALL
 Unique all-male vaudeville ensemble brought their hilarious, acclaimed show to Oxford.
 multi-instrumentalist (and musical director), an escapologist, a surrealist clown-musician, a tiny cowboy... oh, and a horse. And some tigers. And a boss-eyed, Kiss-styled tiger-tamer. And some unicycling. And diablo. And audience participation. And some mime. And lots of water. Basically: if it's variety you want, you will be happy here. There's nothing to offend either (this is a family show, suitable for all ages) - just plenty to amuse, often raising genuine belly-laughs out of the captivated audience. This isn't nu-variety, with the edge of rock-brothel chic that's so trendy nowadays; it's good old-fashioned family fun, and it works 100%, putting a big fat smile on the face of everyone present. The timing of each piece is pitch-perfect too, allowing no time for even a millisecond of attention deficit.
 Incredibly, Slightly Fat... got together in their current form in 2006, in the Devonshire seaside (and folk-festival-hosting) town of Sidmouth. Since then, fixtures have included a sell-out run at the Roundhouse in Camden and accolades have poured in (The Stage describes them as "Pure showmen, clearly heading for the big time") - so if they're on at a theatre near you, get your tickets in quick. Dates can be perused on their website: http://www.slightlyfatfeatures.com
 One last thing: if you sit in the front row (which I recommend) - take a broly!
