or Hell's Angel for variation). There are detailed black and white studies of living cedars, massive hunks of beach driftwood and the grain of the weatherbeaten planks of ruined barns (with a combination of starkness and quirk evoking a kind of hippy Ansell Adams); colour shots of people enjoying beaches and of crazy junk scupltures and a stunningly captured pelican in flight. There are nearly 50 fascinating pictures here so allow yourself some

145. Barracks Lane Community Garden (behind Cowley Rd, signposted via Cumberland Road)

A garden design installation by Kate Jury and Emi Itom is on display in a spacious yurt. These technical print-outs and drawings were a bit dry for my tastes, but if you need a garden designing - a living artwork created, as it were - this would be the place to come to find out more. Helpful people are on hand and the garden itself is a hidden delight. Sign up to the garden's events mailing list while you're there too.
