CINEMA REVIEW

BROTHERHOOD OF THE WOLF
Ultimate Picture Palace until Sun 17th

This is a film like no other I've seen.
A renowned traveller and his kung-fu fighting Native American sidekick arrive to investigate a wave of killings by beast which have been occurring in a dismal part of southern France. The army have proved brutal and incompetent and the whole area is sunk in soggy fear.

It starts very slowly, as various landed sorts parade their prejudices and discuss their theories and a rather annoying love interest is introduced. If you see it in English the dubbing is awful. Let none of this put you off. It's a long film, which builds its momentum in its own way, and pays you patience lavishly.

After that I don't really want to tell you any more for fear of spoiling it. The "rules" for such films are ignored. There are plot twists galore, amazingly crafted scenery indoors and out, and a sumptuously magical-yet-still-just-real sort of atmosphere, through which parades a carnival of grotesques. It's great.

When you get to the final dénouement, take a moment to consider that it's all based on actual events. Truly there is no beast as beastly as man.

Ian Threadgill

COMEDY REVIEW

Simon Munnery, Rob Heeny and John Emmerson
Jericho Comedy Club, 5.11.02

On a dreary Bonfire night when rain dampened the fireworks, another excellent evening was had by all at the Jericho Comedy Club. It was standing room only as MC Silky played host to John Emmerson, Rob Heeny and Simon Munnery. The appearance of Munnery, most well-known for his work as the ridiculously fascist "League against Tedium" and the laughably communist "Alan Parker, Urban Warrior", was no doubt a major draw for the evening, further reinforcing the Club's growing reputation as a venue hosting top names alongside the best of new acts.

Manxman Rob Heeny started off the night after a quick intro from Silky (the ever-cynical Liverpoolian), and after a slightly shaky start his relaxed manner had the crowd enthralled by his shaggy-dog storytelling (eg. the hilarious saga of secretly emailing his Mum's long-lost school heartthrob, the exploration of the possibilities contained within the concept of "Rude Catchphrase", how to be a Manx fortune teller). There was no reason to get too comfortable, however, as Heeny viciously picked out a beardy in the front row and accused him of being too old. Watch out Grandad.

After a quick beer break, John Emmerson leapt onto the stage, the highlight of his act being another surreal agest attack, this time launched upon his own dad (who wasn't there at the time). Hasn't every bloke secretly considered whether he could
