REVIEW: CINEMA

BEHIND ENEMY LINES (12), Odeon George Street

Behind Enemy Lines is a military yarn with action-a-plenty and a smattering of personal dissent thrown in along the way. Supposedly set in Bosnia in the early 1990s, America's boy Owen Wilson is shot down over enemy territory and the cameras follow him as he tries to find safe ground. Cue excuse for half of Bosnia's army to try and kill him, and for young Wilson to even pick up an arch-rival along the way, who is clearly identifiable by his tracksuit top. Where exactly this costume comes from who knows, but it works wonders in making afore-mentioned main enemy visually obvious.

enjoy a good bit of military techno-garble will not be disappointed with the plentitude of acronyms casually thrown around. Do you understand them? It really doesn't matter. If you find it possible not to take the very dubious politics of the film too seriously (or even, ideally, to ignore them completely), then this film works quite well as a blow'em up flick. Before you even walk into the cinema you should know the ending, so just enjoy the spectacle.

Liz Buckle, 15.01.02
Owen Wilson

Owen Wilson, of the fantastically wonky nose, does his bit quite effectively as the man on the run while Gene Hackman continues earning his keep in films that require little more of his skill than regular "God damns", expressed about pretty much everything. Those who

SHARING SPACES? Prayer and the Counselling Relationship
By Jessica Rose. Foreword by Wendy Robinson
The counselling profession is committed to being non-directive and non-judgemental. But what happens when prayer is part of the counsellor's life? Or part of the client's? Or both? Sharing Spaces? Is a practical and insightful contribution to an under-explored area, looking at ways in which prayer can inform and nourish the counselling process, as well as ways in which the two areas can be difficult to integrate.
"Jessica Rose, in this wonderfully clear and realistic book ... is painfully honest about the pitfalls, the misconceptions of both praying and counselling that will distort what we try to do..." Rowan Williams, Archbishop of Wales
"Wisely, Jessica Rose refuses to offer neat solutions, but she takes us to the very heart of the questions that we ought to be asking" Bishop Kallistos of Diokleia
