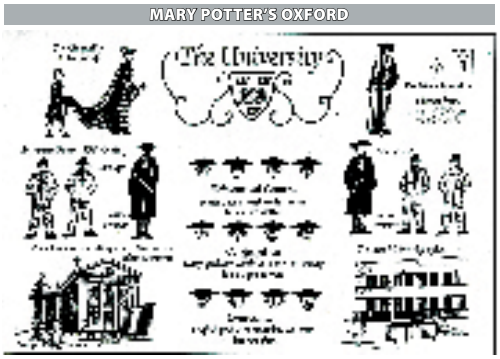
MARY POTTER'S OXFORD



1. The Chancellor of the University is an honorary title, held for life. The actual administration is the responsibility of the Vice-Chancellor, who is elected for a four year term. The current Chancellor is the Rt. Hon. C F Patten (former Governor of Hong Kong and Honorary Fellow of Balliol), who was elected in 2003. Other candidates at the last Convocation included the Rt. Hon. Lord Bingham of Cornhill (Senior Law Lord and Honorary Fellow of Balliol & Nuffield). Notorious Oxford man Howard Marks (convicted drug smuggler and Mr Nice, graduate of Balliol) threatened to stand but was not nominated.
2. The only other time when Convocation comes into its own is for the election of the Professor of Poetry. Congregation quietly adjusted the University Statutes after World War II, because their proposed reforms were being steadily voted down by elderly graduates.
3. A Senior and Junior Proctor are elected each year from among the dons, though pro-Proctors can be enrolled when this is thought necessary.
   In the past, they exercised considerable power. Accompanied by four bowler-hatted 'Bulldogs' (the University's private police), they used to patrol the streets from 9pm-4am, on the lookout for such heinous offences as drinking in pubs, being out of college after midnight, attending a dance, or being seen in the company of a woman of the town. A whispered "Member and Character, Sir" would alert the Proctor to the latter situation. When an undergraduate was caught offending against a University regulation, he would be approached in a very gentlemanly fashion: "Are you a member of the University?", and then, "Your name and College, Sir?"
   They were particularly in evidence when a celebration was likely to occur, as at the end of Eights Week, when the winning boat was sometimes ceremoniously burned.
4. The Bulldog pub on St Aldate's (now the Old Tom) followed an old tradition of displaying different meanings of its name on opposite sides of its sign: the canine on the one side, the bowler-hatted variety on the other.
5. The Clarendon Building once housed the University administration, including Proctors on the ground floor and Police Force of Marshal and Bulldogs in the basement. The Clarendon Building and the Examination Schools were occupied in 1970 by undergraduate revolutionaries, inspired by the 1968 student revolts in France and Italy. Things were relatively quiet in the revolution department until the recent Tuition Fees changes, which in the 1990s resulted in student occupations of both the Examination Schools and the University's Magdalen Street offices.
