ISIS OXFORD SCHOOL OF ENGLISH
Organised and ambitious individual required by flourishing English language school to join our team working full-time with groups of foreign teenage students. You would help to manage and supervise the groups, from the moment we receive the booking to their departure, with flights, coaches, accommodation, activities and excursions. We are especially keen to find someone who can develop their skills, enlarge their responsibilities and become a key part of our team. Direct experience is not as important as potential, though teaching experience might be a bonus. Initial salary up to £21,000, increasing as you demonstrate your abilities.
Please email CV and covering letter to:

ISIS OXFORD SCHOOL OF ENGLISH
Administration / Reception
Communicating with students from all over the world is just one aspect of this exciting post. Working with our Office Manager (and everyone else in our busy school!), you'll be jointly responsible for dealing with students' enquiries (online, by phone and face-to-face) as well as for liaising with our network of worldwide agents, for the activity programme, visas, accommodation, general requests and administration, and a whole host of issues over a vast range of different topics. You should be enthusiastic, adaptable, diplomatic and motivated, and above all possess a great fund of initiative. It's a great opportunity in an exciting and very rewarding working environment, for those with or without direct experience (as long as you have the ability to gain it!). Initial salary circa £18,000 - £21,000, depending on experience.
Please email CVs and covering letter to:

JOBS OFFERED

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
Online Development Assistant
(51 Week, Fixed Term Contract)
Oxford University Press is a department of the University of Oxford, which furthers the University's objective of excellence in research, scholarship, and education by publishing worldwide.
The Academic and Trade team publishes a range of content in print, from the critically acclaimed 'Very Short Introductions' series to the most prestigious scholarly editions.
We are seeking a development assistant to collaborate in the implementation of the Press's electronic strategy across this range, adding to and growing our existing suite of online products.
This post affords a rare opportunity to work in a small team developing an online publishing programme and to contribute to the online presence of such an authoritative brand.
The development assistant will support the work of the development editor by clearing rights, sourcing backlist and out of print content, recording external links, and tracking progress.
The ideal candidate will be educated to degree level or equivalent, will be able to demonstrate a systematic and accurate approach to getting things done, and be confident using computers creatively. Experience in publishing would also be an advantage.
The salary offered will be in the region of £16,500 depending on the skills and experience. OUP offers a full range of supporting benefits.
Closing date: 4 May 2010
To apply please visit http://ukjobs.oup.com

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
Departmental Administrator
Oxford University Press is a department of the University of Oxford which furthers the University's objective of excellence in research, scholarship, and education by publishing worldwide.
The ELT Division is a global leader in the provision of multimedia English language teaching and learning materials. Operating in over 100 countries, it reaches millions of teachers and students each year to support the development of English language proficiency.
Within this role you will be providing general administrative support to the production department. This will involve assisting with a variety of tasks including sorting post, maintaining the libraries, distributing file copies, keeping departmental records, answering calls and providing general office duties.
We are looking for a well organised individual, fully conversant with Microsoft Office packages. The successful candidate will have a conscientious and can-do approach to work, written and numerical accuracy and attention to detail and excellent administrative and IT skills.
The salary offered will be in the region of £18,000 depending on skills and experience. OUP offers a full range of supporting benefits.

Production Editor
(6 Month, Fixed Term Contract)
Oxford University Press is a department of the University of Oxford which furthers the University's objective of excellence in research, scholarship, and education by publishing worldwide.
The ELT Division is a global leader in the provision of multimedia English language teaching and learning materials. Operating in over 100 countries, it reaches millions of teachers and students each year to support the development of English language proficiency.
We are looking for a Production Editor to work as part of an editorial team producing market-specific ELT materials for secondary school students learning English in the CAMENA (Central Asia, Middle East and North Africa) region. You will be responsible for developing mainly digital support items for key titles, working closely with the editorial team, Design, New Media, Production and freelancers, to ensure your projects are delivered on schedule and within budget.
You will have an aptitude for editing to a high level of accuracy and you will demonstrate good attention to detail in all areas of your work. Strong organisational and communication skills are essential, together with the ability to manage a busy workload and work to tight deadlines. You will also have good IT skills, and some previous experience of copy-editing and proof-reading ELT materials would be an advantage. The ideal candidate will be qualified to degree level or equivalent.
