and nowhere is this better shown than in the 5th Symphony. Subtitled A Soviet Artist's Reply to Just Criticism it brought Shostakovich back into favour, but is it a celebration of life in the USSR or a rail against tyranny? Is the ending uplifting or oppressive? Either way, there is a vast amount of high drama together with some beautiful melodies in the piece.

The drama in Carl Nielson's music cannot be so easily mapped onto his life. Nielson led a relatively serene life composing six wonderful symphonies
