ATTHE NEW INCLUDE AND THE AND

much like Eric and Ernic Kim Wall, tired of being the but of Cliv Haywards jokes, makes a bid for success by breaking away from his partner in order to become a serious plavright, whilst Clive does his best to derail Kim's progress in order to preserve their partnership. The whole thing is a magnificently craffed parody of The Morecambe and Wise Show as we remember it with snogs, alsaptick and special guests intermingled with Clive and Kim playing off each other just as Fir and Ernic del Underpinning all which, however, there is more than just homage act is so much better that I can't help but wonder

The most important thing to say is that if you go to see this show expecting to see Firi and Ernie you may well be disappointed as this simply isn't what the writters have tried to achieve. What they have tried to do and have succeeded in doing is creating a show that evokes the feel of Eric and Ernie and pays them a heartfelt tribute and what more fitting tribute could there be than to write a play that could be described to be as Clive and Kim described the men themselves – 'very funny'.

to two great men; it is also a loving study both of the men themselves, their relationship and careers.

If there is a criticism to be made it is that the first act is noticeably weaker than the second though this in itself is not damning given that all of the big set pieces are all to be found in the second act including arendition of 'Bring Me Sunshine' it should hardly be surprising. Besides, it isn't that their start sin't frumy (it really is,) it's just that the material in the second why the first act couldn't have been improved.
