Sconcing may be brought to bear when a college member disapproves of someone's behaviour at table. Sconceable offences include talking at dinner about women, religion or politics (all bad for the digestion) or referring to the portraits hung in hall (which smacks of 'making' conversation). When the challenge is issued, the college sconce pot is brought, full of beer (usually), and the offender has to stand on the table and attempt to down it in one go. The amount varies from two pints at Corpus, Oriel or Jesus, up to three and three quarter pints at St. John's. If the attempt is successful, the challenger may then be sconced in turn. The final loser pays for the beer. Though often threatened, sconcing is rarely carried out these days. If you choose to re-establish the tradition, please don't
