Café Zouk
1st floor, 135 High Street.
Tel. 01865 251600

Conveniently located on the High Street and distinctly more stylish than the majority of its competitors in Oxford, Café Zouk is a tempting option and one that, usually, will not let you down. Ok, so it's position above Carfax chippie isn't the sexiest one I can imagine but once you get inside, the décor has a comforting opulence which suggests that your meal may be a good one, albeit a little pricey. Upon looking at the menu though, it becomes clear that it's no more expensive here than any of the other mid-market Indians. Starters are generally between three and five pounds, with mains ranging from five to about ten pounds, with (as usual) the king prawn dishes topping the price list. What has tended to make Café Zouk a rather expensive little expedition however, most times I have visited, is the range of too-tempting-to-resist side dishes. The onion bhajis which crazily are not let down. The other potential problem with Café Zouk is the service which ranges from courteous, pleasant and efficient, to downright rude. On my last visit, we were left lingering on the stairs without being offered a table for more than ten minutes, only for everyone's starter to be forgotten when our order was eventually taken. I'm prepared to give them the benefit of the doubt though and hope that this was one off. If it was, the gorgeous, fresh tasting, non-greasy mains, not to mention the creamy lass and unforgettable onion bhajis, make Café Zouk well worth a visit.

on the menu but which the staff always seem happy to make for you, are quite simply the best onion bhajis in the world. A million miles from the horrid little hard balls you get elsewhere, these are soft, almost creamy, and melt in your mouth.

Mains are similarly reliable, whether you go for the balti style options served in a hot balti pan (to my mind, the very best way to eat a curry is like this, and mopped up with a naan), or the shashlik options which smell absolutely divine and come sizzling on a skillet, smothered in onions and green peppers. Sadly though, all is not perfect. A naan is the natural accompaniment (surely!) to a sauce rich curry, yet here, the naans are not all they might be. Dense and doughy where surely you're wishing they were light and fluffy, they're definitely something of a

RESTAURANT REVIEW

Oxford Thai, 179 Cowley Road. Tel. 01865 203763

For those of us living in the centre of town, the decision to traverse Magdalen Bridge is not taken lightly - the Cowley Road often seeming quite an interminable distance away. This is simply not the case though, and given the excellent range of restaurants and Bars lurking on the other side, the extra walking is easily justified. Oxford Thai is a case in point. Near Tesco Metro (and cashpoints - which is good as this restaurant doesn't accept plastic), it serves up a wide variety of tasty, and more to the point perhaps, ridiculously cheap dishes. Seriously, £5.50 for a very filling dish of vegetables, the meat of your choice and rice or noodles, cannot be complained at! Better still, House wine starts at £6 - £6! Yes. When I visited, I was clearly feeling a bit flash, as I actually passed on the six pounder and went for the next one up - a well recognised brand name wine for a very pleasing £7.

I've been to Oxford Thai a couple of times now; firstly with a girls' drinking society, during which the relaxed atmosphere and no frills paper tablecloths were a positive bonus, and secondly with my boyfriend where ditto, we felt for a cheap, filling supper we hadn't gone far wrong. I would particularly recommend the noodle dishes, of which there aren't many but which are very good indeed. Similarly, the mixed starter plate for two is excellent, consisting of tempura vegetables, and a selection of tempura vegetables, accompanied by a couple of dips including an excellent sate.

My one criticism is perhaps that, despite the long menu, all the dishes seem a little 'samey' in terms of flavour. However, given the price I don't think this is too much of a problem, particularly as the ingredients (especially the vegetables) seem of a very good quality. Service is also swift and efficient, occasionally to the point where you feel a little guilty for lingering for any longer than absolutely necessary, but this is probably just a product of this little restaurant's increasing popularity.

All in all, a very good bet indeed for some (very) informal and tasty nosh.

"I like swimming - it does take the weight off your legs. There seem to be two main groups of swimmers - Roundheads bashing out their 30 lengths in cold water with masochistic determination and Cavaliers wallowing in warm water hoping for little floating tables with gin and tonic. This is a Cavalier pool, although I haven't had my gin and tonic yet. It is clean, well-lit and well decorated. Pool temperature 30-31°, Jacuzzi 37°. I usually have the pool to myself. Friday afternoons tend to build up after 2pm, though.
"I did have a look at the machines and weights upstairs but decided that was for Round-heads."
