Library Graduate Trainee Opportunities 2005

For the best start to your career, Oxford's one year graduate trainee posts can offer you an excellent introduction to library and information work within the context of world-class collections. We currently have two vacancies commencing around Autumn 2005, which provide the necessary experience required by UK based departments of library and information studies.

 $One Graduate \ Trainee is \ required to \ work in \ the \ \textbf{Educational}$ Studies Library and to support the development of an OULS-wide user education programme. Duties will be varied as the Educational Studies Library offers a full range of academic library services to readers. OULS has just launched an organisation-wide user education strategy and this post offers an exciting opportunity to be involved with its implementation, including web site development marketing and promotion. The other Graduate Trainee post is at the Sainsbury dynamic library specialising in business studies. The successful applicant will be involved in many aspects of this hybrid library service, especially working with customers. It offers the trainee an excellent opportunity to experience working with students and academics, and to familiarise him/herself with business information sources, as well as to gain a good overview of how a business school library service fits together. The trainees at Oxford benefit from on-the-job training and attendance at specially designed weekly training sessions

Library at the Saïd Business School, a modern and

(following the SCONUL Code of Practice). There are also many other learning opportunities within Oxford, which include computing training, general staff development courses and visits to other libraries. In addition, each library provides experience in a wide range of library tasks, including enquiry work, cataloguing and genera administrative duties.

For information about the trainee experience at Oxford please visit the web site written by past Oxford trainees at http://www.lib.ox.ac.uk/owl/

Further particulars and an application form may be obtained from the University website at www.admin.ox.ac.uk/fp or from the OULS Personnel Section, Osney One, OULS, Osney Mead, Oxford, OX2 0ES, telephone 01865 277171 fax 01865 202948, e-mail personnel@ouls.oxford.ac.uk.
