PUB REVIEW

The Anchor Inn

2 Hayfield Road, Jericho. OX2 6TT. Tel: 510282

The Anchor is now one of my favourite places to eat and drink in Oxford and I encourage anyone who hasn't made the trek to it to do so as soon as possible.

It is first and foremost a pub with excellent ales on tap (including a regular guest ale - Everard's on my recent visit), a good selection of spirits and wines and at the moment, mulled wine and hot toddies. There is a small public bar area with an open fire which is perfect for the chilly winter evenings which are now upon us whilst the rest of the building is given over to a relaxed, informal and sprawling seating (dining) area which includes a small but sunny conservatory for day-time visits.

The menu is a mix of European gastropub staples but served with imagination and using locally sourced quality ingredients (they seem keen to make you aware of this by providing a brochure of the Abingdon farm where much of their meat comes from, on the bar).

I was there for lunch on a chilly but sunny autumnal day and after a long walk by the river/canal needed warming up so plumped for the Cassoulet (£13.50 in the "Specials" section). I wouldn't normally look to pay this much for lunch but as it promised duck confit, belly pork and Toulouse sausage I was prepared to fork out. I was not disappointed. It came attractively served in an iron skillet with the duck confit perched on top (I'm not sure this is terribly traditional but who cares?). It was well cooked and delicious with lots of meat and some excellent Toulouse sausage that was firm and salty as proper Toulouse should be.

This was great comfort food and made me forget my weary limbs from the long walk I'd had. It would have been traditionally French to have some robust red wine with this (and their wine list looked brilliant) but I did the seasonal thing and had a mulled wine. I was pleased to note this wasn't just poured straight out on draft like you see in some places, but was made using a glass of proper fresh wine and then the hot water and spices were added.

I just about had room for pudding and had my eye on the pumpkin pie (about 4 and a half quid) which I had not had before. It's also coming up to Thanksgiving in the US so I thought I'd join in with some newly found yankee spirit. It was sensational. The pumpkin pie itself was sweet but spicy with excellent pastry and was accompanied by vanilla ice-cream and a sublime butterscotch sauce in its own little jug. I haven't had a pud this good in ages and scoffed the lot in record time.

Overall, the Anchor is an excellent venue both for a drink and for food and I can't recommend it enough. It may be a little hidden away from the main drag, but please find it and give them the patronage and plaudits they deserve.

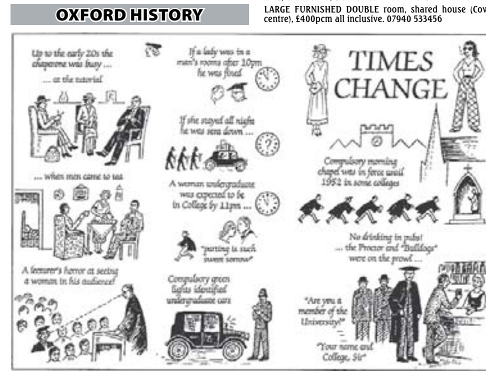
OXFORD HISTORY



It is hard to believe that as recently as the 1960s an undergraduate could be sent down (ie, permanently expelled) if a woman was found in his rooms after midnight.

Stories abound of adventures had while climbing into - or out of - college after hours. It was considered especially daring for a man to have a bath in a women's college, and it was reputed that anyone who had achieved this with impunity was allowed to wear a navy blue tie emblazoned with silver taps. If he could also produce the bath taps themselves, he was entitled to gold taps on the tie. Now, alas, with mixed colleges, such escapades have lost their spice.

Up to about 50 years ago, the majority of dons were in Holy Orders, Latin was a compulsory entrance subject for all disciplines, and daily attendance at morning chapel was required from all those living in College, even the non-Christians (who signed a register at the door). The main object seems to have been to ensure that everyone got up, rather than providing the Chaplain with an audience.

University rules which operated until well after the Second World War include the following:

All undergraduates' cars carried green identification lights, were not permitted to be parked in the streets overnight, and were not allowed to be used in the mornings. (In the 1960s, however, undergraduates were not allowed to keep cars at all).

No undergraduates were allowed into pubs.

Written proctorial permission was required for all dances (the Proctors are responsible for discipline within the University; the way round this was to have a 'Social Evening' with the dancing interrupted for a statutory proctorial game of 'Pin the Tail on the Donkey' or such).

Dancing teachers had to be licensed by the University.

Undergraduates found out of college after midnight (or 10pm in some cases) were fined.

Undergraduates were not allowed to travel more than 10 miles from Oxford without permission.
