CINEMA REVIEW

Valkyrie [12A]

"The SS hover menacingly. A vile sergeant at a gate signals his vileness by burning a mosquito from his hand with a cigarette."

Showing at the Odeon George Street & Vue Cinema to at least Thu 5th Feb. See Cinema listings below.

Avenging furies in military uniform; the Prussian gear uniform we automatically think of as the hated enemy makes for a wonderful starting point for a really bold piece of cinema.

We begin with Kenneth Branagh offering Tom Hollander a bottle-branded bottle of Cointreau and a pilot having failed with a sticky-stuck follow-up scene in which Branagh has to recover the unexploded Cointreau from Hollander.

The SS hover menacingly. A vile sergeant at a gate signals his vileness by burning a mosquito from his hand with a cigarette.

achieved and incredibly efficient and lethal military machine runs to order in the background. Yet another general is doing something fishy about having Tom Cruise and Jamie Parker in the back of his jeep.

I'm sorry, but it was impossible to take this seriously, or to avoid the disruptive effect of the raft of familiar faces on display.

Couldn't the budget have been spent on a cast that would have acted this without it looking like a vanity project?
