OXFORD HISTORY

1. The Lady of the 'Mistletoe Bough', whilst playing in a game of 'Blind Man's Buff' during the festivities of her own wedding day, hid herself and was never seen again; she had climbed into a chest, the lid of which had snapped its catch and imprisoned her, and it was many years before her body was found.
2. Lord Lovell, involved in the rising of Lambert Simnel against the King, returned to Minster Lovell after his defeat and hid in a secret room to which only one servant had access. This servant died suddenly, however, and unable to get out, Lovell died of starvation.
3. Lady Hoby had shut her youngest son up in a small closet with his books as a punishment for failing to learn his lessons when she received an urgent summons from Queen Elizabeth. She rushed off, forgetting about her son, and the servants assumed he had gone with his mother. It was only after she returned that his corpse was found. Since this episode, hysterical sobbing has been heard, and the figure of a woman in Elizabethan dress washing her hands has been seen.
4. Weston Manor was once a nunnery, and is now a hotel. Many guests have seen and heard a great-coach with four horses drive through the locked gates of the court-yard and disappear into the night.
